Mittal added that Bengaluru, the undisputed startup hub of the country, is also experiencing similar troubles with rents doubling in the last few years.

A flourishing startup ecosystem requires a city to be truly cosmopolitan, and Mumbai scores on this point as it is home to the creative industry, finance and healthcare professionals, he said.

Rizwan Koita of Citiustech also alluded to the infrastructure issues that exist in the financial capital and added that the space is getting very competitive with other cities like Noida and Gurugram also vying to be the preferred choice for startups.

Telcos failingto appoint an officer stand to face action, the DoT said in a directive on Friday

National Security Council Secretariat, the trusted telecom portal acts as a certifying window where empanelled network gear suppliers can track progress of applications seeking approval for their products.

DoT had a year ago asked all telcos to appoint a nodal officer who would be authorised to access the trusted telecom portal, provide inputs, and share details about all network gear they plan to deploy in India with the NCSC, lieutenant general (retired) Rajesh Pant.

In March 2021, the department had issued amendments in telecom licences for network gear procurements, mandating them to only use equipment from trusted/authentic sources only. Under the process, network vendors or original equipment makers(OEMs) are required to provide detailed active components that go into the network gear along with the place of manufacturing and the company's headquarters, ownership structure of the organisation, and details about the intellectual property rights.

Additionally, they must provide similar information about software that powers the equipment.
